i in léigim l'ig'im', léigean, etc.

[1] In Irish, a long vowel in a non-initial syllable tends to clash with the regular word-stress, and opposing trends are discernible :—

(i) The rule of stress predominates, while the vowel either (a) retains its length, or at least its phonemic identity (see §§ 6,366,367), as is usual in Connacht, or (b) is shortened, as is common in Northern Irish and Scottish dialects, and was the case in Early Irish (Thurneysen, § 43).

(ii) The vowel prevails, and takes the stress from an initial short vowel. Traces of this development occur in Connacht, but it is most widespread in Southern Irish, furthered no doubt, by Anglo-Norman influences (cf. Irish Dialects, p. 83 ff.). In consequence of this, the short vowel (a) loses its basic V quality and is changed in accord with its flanking phonemes in the particular word (§ 422), and (b) may even disappear, where the resultant combination of its flanking phonemes is consistent with one of the normal patterns of distribution (§ 435).

415. These normally = e:, e.g. réusún re:su:n, éugcóir e:go:r', éan, céad.

[1] The source here is probably ó, a more archaic form, which from the 7th century onwards gave way gradually to úa. Both bóchaill and búachaill are attested for Old Irish. (Lewis-Pedersen, § 13 ; Thurneysen, § 60 n).

[2] Cf. vuəm, etc. in Scottish dialects, where the development can be traced back to the 16th century.

[1] In 'Southern' Irish, such long vowels attracted the main stress, whereupon the weakened initial vowel changed its quality according to the environment. Connacht speakers apparently imitated this pronunciation, but restored the stress to the now modified first syllable. Cf. Irish Dialects, p. 99.

Short Unstressed Vowels.

433. Short unstressed vowels generally disappear initially in a number of verbal forms, e.g. adeir, adubhairt, atá. Cf. thaisbéin.

434. Such vowels are normally retained in the words amach, amuigh, amárach, anuraidh ə'norhi:, anuas, etc. See § 373.

435. The influence of 'Southern' Irish can be detected in a few words, where a long vowel or a diphthong in the second syllable, preceded by l or r, attracted to itself the primary stress. But the inherently sonorous lateral or vibrant tended to absorb the adjacent weakened vowel, or to be itself anticipated and form an initial CC group with a preceding consonant ; whereupon the original initial vowel disappeared and the word, thus reduced, regained the regular pattern with its stress on the first syllable. (See §§ 294, 497 ; and Irish Dialects, pp. 99 ff). Examples are arán ra:n, biorán b'r'a:n, peiriaclach p'r'iəklux, coróin kro:n', paráiste, forfhás, coláiste, galánta gla:nti:.

i: (cf. § 367), e.g. nádúrtha na:du:rhi:, léine, teine, clisde k'l'is't'i:, oile/eile el'i:, eala, rinne rin'i:, cumhra ku:rhi: ; in past part. e.g. molta molti:, déanta, leagtha, briste, buailte buəl't'i: ; in plurals, e.g. sgeana s'k'ani:, bróga bro:gi:, guaillí guəl'i:, daoine, caiple. In at least some of such words the occurrence of an i:—like vowel must be of long standing e.g. súile su:l'i: (O.I. súili), cnámha kra:vi: (O.I. cnámai) Frequently -i and -e are in free fluctuation in early modern Irish orthography.

437. With lost fricatives, ai, i, ui = i:, e.g. agaibh agi:, brógaibh bro:gi:, aithreachaibh ar'huxi:, doiligh del'i:, ceannuigh

438. a, ea, iu, with lost fricatives, = u:, e.g. madadh, milleadh oibriughadh eb'r'u:, déanamh.

439. In non-final position, quality depends on environment cf. §§ 18, 329.

ai, i, ui = i, e.g. banais, Nodlaig, socair, capaill, milis, meinic fairsing, tuigim, áluinn.

ea = e, e.g. Éireannach e:r'enux ; = i:, e.g. goibhneacha (?goibhnidheachd) gev'n'i:xt ; = iə, faitcheas fat'iəs.

a, i, = o, e.g. thugadar hugudor, imirt im'ort', a, ea, o, = u, e.g. éadan e:dun, amharc, bacach, peacach, portach focal, cailleach, soitheach sex'ux, meisneach, easbog aspuk, éadtrom e:drum, anam, doras/dorus.

440. Final a, e, and non-final ai, i, ui, ea, disappear in lach(a) aithmhéal(a) af'e:l, foighid(e), sochraid(e) soxri:d', Éabh(a) e:v glas-uain(e) glasuən', tróc(ai)re tro:kr'ə, faois(i)din fi:s't'un príbh(i)léid p'r'i:v'l'e:d', inn(i)stear in's't'or, tarr(ai)ngean tarn'i:n, muinnt(ea)rdhas min't'r'es.

Additional Unstressed Vowels.

441. A short vowel appears regularly in áth a:hə, ci(o)th k'ix'ə, ri(o)th rix'ə, cuid kid'ə ; cf. céacht(a), cloidheamh klav'ə As to loan-words such as geata, see § 225. The prep. pron. air is by some speakers pronounced er', by others er'ə.

442. A long vowel has developed in second person plural imperatives, e.g. bídh b'i:g'i:, déanaidh d'i:nig'i:, etc. ; cf. § 113. Among the scholars who have concerned themselves with this oft-discussed feature are Bergin (Gadelica, i, 73 ff), Ó Máille (ZCP, ix, 350 ff), Sommerfelt (Ériu, ix, 68 f), O'Rahilly (Irish Dialects, 58 ff), Breatnach (Ériu, xvi, 49 ff).

The Epenthetic Vowel.

443. When preceded by a short vowel, a word-final consonant cluster is simplified by the development of an epenthetic vowel, if (i) the first element in the cluster is l or r[1], and the second is one of the voiced consonants b, g, m, or palatal bh, e.g. sgolb skolub, dealg d'alug, borb borub, meirbh m'er'iv', orm orum, mairg mar'ig', fearg f'arug ;[2] or (ii) the first element is n, and the second either m or palatal bh, e.g. bainbh ban'iv', seinm s'iɴ'im', ainm an'im'.

444. Word-medial clusters are similarly broken by epenthesis between n/l/r and a voiced labial, g, or ch, e.g. seanmóir s'anumo:r', seanchas s'anuxus, Alba(in) alubin', salchar saluxur, seirbhís s'er'iv'i:s', dearmad, airgead ar'ig'ed, margadh marugu:, dorcha doruxə, dearbhtha d'arufi:, urchóid oruxo:d'.

[1] See §§ 304 ff. The effect of such groups is, of course, not peculiar to Irish ; e.g. in such words as warm, worn, etc. southern English speakers suppress the r, while other dialects introduce an epenthetic vowel into the consonant group.

[2] The word earball rubuʟ (and perhaps purgadóir, § 497) is a case of epenthesis with subsequent loss of stress by the initial syllable and its ultimate disappearance. Cf. § 435 ; Lewis-Pedersen, § 159 ; Borgstrøm, § 191.

451. Palatal bh, mh, next to a stressed vowel normally = v', e.g. Aibhistín av'is't'i:n', bheirim, luibh, mhéaduigh, cuimhne, geimhreadh, aoibhinn.

Exceptionally = h, in coimhigheach kihiəx ; = f', next t(h), e.g. deithbhir d'ef'ir', caithmheach kaf'ux, sléibhte s'ʟ'e:f't'i:, aith-mhéala. Cf. the disappearance of bh in raibh roh/rəu, and that of mh in áirmhim a:r'i:m'.

452. Before v', representing palatal bh, short stressed vowels develop as follows (See §§ 423 ff.) :—

ai, oi = e, e.g. saidhbhir, taidhbhse, goibhneachd.
ui = i, e.g. luibh.

453. Preceding v', representing palatal mh, short stressed vowels develop as follows :—

ei = i, e.g. deimhin, geimhreadh, neimhneach ; = a, e.g. reimhre rav'r'ə[1].

oi = i, e.g roimhe ; = e, e.g. doimhne dev'n'ə, comhling ; = a, e.g. goimh.

454. Non-palatal bh, mh, before a stressed vowel, or after a stressed long vowel, = v, e.g. bhuail, amháin, lámh, fréamh, snámh, likewise after a short vowel in dubh duv.

Exceptionally, = f, next to th, e.g. sgríobhtha s'k'r'i:fi:, gabhtha gofi:, naomhtha ; disappear in taobh ti:(v), cf. § 355, gabh go(h).

455. After a consonant, they generally = zero or are absorbed by lengthened vowels, e.g. fágbhaim fa:gim', tógbhaim to:g'im', seachtmhain s'axtin', uaireasbhaidh, cosmhail kosu:l', slachtmhar sʟaxtu:r, marbhadh maru:.

Exceptionally, = f, after th, e.g. bláthmhar bla:fur, uathbhás ufa:s ; = a devoiced labial plosive in teasbhach t'aspux ; retained after r in féarmhar, after gh in bríoghmhar.

[1] This springs rather from the depalatalizing effects of the initial r, originally R'. See Borgstrøm : Norsk Tidsskrift for Sprogvidenskap Suppl. Bind, I. 207.

456. Medial non-palatal bh is normally lost after a short stressed vowel, with consequent developments as follows :—

a, ea, o, = əu, e.g. abha(inn), slabhra, cabhair/cobhair, labhairt ləuurt', treabhadh, leabhar, gobha gəuə. a = o:, e.g. tabhair, tabhairt, gabháltas, gabháil ('leaven') go:l'; the vowel in tabhair is further shortened in tabhair d(h)om torum.

io, iu, u, = u:, e.g. siobhal/siubhal, adubhairt, ubhall u:l, cubhar.

457. With non-palatal mh, short stressed vowels develop as follows :—

a, normally = a (§ 422), exceptionally = o:, e.g. amhrán.

ea, normally equivalent to a, but = u: in deamhan, deamhain d'u:n, d'u:n'.

o = u:, e.g. romham, romhat; = u:/o:, e.g. comhairle, Domhnach, comharsa, etc., cf. § 61; = əu, e.g. domhan, domhain dəun'; = o:, e.g. comhrádh. Exceptionally = o, e.g. comhartha kohorə, comhthrom korhum.

u = u:, e.g. umhlaidheacht u:li:xt; = u, e.g. cumhang. (See also §§ 199,483).

458. With lost palatal bh, mh, short unstressed vowels = i:, e.g. caiplibh kap'l'i:, guaillibh guəl'i:, Gaillimh gal'i:, creidimh, d(h)á-ríribh ya:-r'i:r'i:, do fhágaibh da:gi:, lámhaibh la:vi:, brógaibh.

459. With lost non-palatal bh, mh, such vowels = u:, e.g. creideamh, déanamh, conntabhairt kuntu:rt', breitheamhnas b'r'ehu:nus, fearamhail f'aru:l', colbha, béalbhach; likewise the epenthetic vowel in marbh maru:, etc.

Exceptionally, bh is retained after medial epenthetic vowels in cearrbhach, marbhán maruva:n; bh = v' in tarbhach tar'iv'ux.

460. Word-initial dh, gh, = ɣ, j, e.g. dhá, ghé, ghabh, Dhia. Exceptionally = h, in a by-form of dhá bhliadhain ha: v'l'iən' (3).

461. Word-medial dh, gh, generally = zero, with coalescenc of their flanking syllables, e.g. bliadhain, baoghal, faghái Brighid, dligheadh, buailfidhear, cuideóghaidh kid'o:j.

Exceptions are (i) palatal dh, gh, = j, e.g. léighim l'e:jim láighe la:jə, truaighe, luaigheacht lu:ji:xt, nuaidhe nu:jə (ii) palatal dh = v' in guidhe, eidhean(n): this tendency goe back to the very beginning of modern Irish, cf. O'Rahilly Hermathena, p. 185; (iii) the group -ghth- = x' in beannuighth etc., -thgh- = k' in aithghiorra, the non-palatal group -ghbh- = in dioghbháil d'i:va:l', -ghth- = f in toghtha tofi:; (iv) non-palata dh, gh, = g in diadhanta d'iəgunti:, iorghail oruga:l'; replace by x in eiteadha et'u:xi:; (v) where dh, gh are flanked by a lon vowel and diphthong, coalescence does not occur, e.g. fiadhánta f'i:a:ntes, fuagháil, also sídheóg, etc.

462. Short stressed vowels are thus modified by the loss c dh, gh (See further O'Rahilly: Irish Dialects, pp. 178ff.) :—

a, ai, ea = əi, e.g. adharc, gadhar, aghaidh, meadhrach maighdean.

Otherwise, = a: in adhlacadh a:luku:, adhmad, adhbha breaghdha, faghthar, leaghadh l'a:v, deagh-dhuine, maighistir aidhbheirseóir, a:vurs'o:r', fagháil fa:l'.

463. Palatal dh, gh, normally disappear in word-final position e.g. aghaidh, réidh, préidh pre:, and, with lengthening of th adjacent vowel, in doiligh, dheachaidh, etc.

Exceptionally, = j, in cruaidh, suidh, uaigh; dh = v' i guidh giv'; = g' in bidh b'i:g'i:, déanaidh d'i:nig'i:; gh = x in troigh, istigh, amuigh.

Exceptionally = ə, e.g. lobhadh ləuə, treabhadh. Cf. carghas kari:s, garrdha, iomdha.

467. For non-palatal dh, in the inflexion -(e)adh of active verbs, the form -(u)x occurs as the more general alternative to u: and v, e.g. do mholadh volux/volu:, do bhíodh v'i:x/v'i:v, do bhuailfeadh vuəl'hux/vuəl'hu:.

Exceptionally, (i) before a palatal s the ending -dh = d̠, e.g. (a)deireadh sé ə'd'er'ed̠ s'e: ; (ii) in the passive -(e)adh appears as u: after a consonant, e.g. do rinneadh rin'u:, do leagadh l'agu:, but as v where an intervocalic consonant has disappeared, e.g. do ceannuigheadh k'ani:v.

Short Vowels before Nasals and Laterals

488. Here the details given in §§ 422-432 are supplemented with particular reference to the treatment of short stressed vowels before ll, m, ng, nn, when these consonants are either in word-final position or followed by other consonants. Our dialect is at one with those of Northern Irish and Southern Scottish Gaelic retaining such vowels almost invariably without lengthening or diphthongization,[1] although subject in certain cases to changes of quality as short vowels.

a, ea, ai, = a, e.g. am, lann lan, ball, aill, aimsir, beann, cainnt, Fraingc, teampall t'ampul, greann, geall, gleann, mannt, clann.

Exceptions: a:, in the words thall ha:l, anall, ar ball.

ei, i, oi, ui, = i, e.g. seinm s'in'im', binn b'in', luing, cill, roinnt rin't', muinntir, suim.

Exceptions: oi commonly = e, before laterals, e.g. moill.
io, commonly = i, with nn, e.g. ionnsuidhe insi:, cionn k'in;
also = u, e.g. iomchar, ionnraic unrik', i:, with loss of consonant in iongnadh.
o, = o, before laterals, e.g. coll, Goll.
u, before nasals, e.g. trom, conntabhairt.
u:, with lost consonant in congnamh.
u, = u, e.g. cunntas, cunntae kunde:.

Vibrants

489. Word-initial vibrants generally = r, e.g. rún, ruibe, réidhteach, reamhar, do rinne.

Exceptionally, palatal lenited r remains, e.g. dá ribh, do réir ə r'e:r'.

490. Medial and final lenited and unlenited vibrants normally = r', r, e.g. aire, bodhar, deireadh, athair, gáire, maor, mórán, fearr, searrach, páirt pa:rt', srian.

Exceptions: (i) palatal r = r, in the ending -úir, e.g. nádúir na:du:r, doctúir, and certain clusters (§272), e.g., imirt, páirt, goirt gort', toir(r)neach, toirseach, áirne a:rn'ə; = d', in dréimire d'r'e:m'id'ə; this is one of the restrictive effects of palatalization in r, cf. § 219 ; = l', e.g. creabhar k'l'əuur, feirm f'el'im', likewise in a by-form of do réir l'e:r'; cf. English purple < purpre, etc. ; (ii) non-palatal lenited r = r' in the forms aimsear (aimsir) muinntear (muinntir) miN't'ir', paidear (paidir) pad'ir', t(h)ar, aistear, tuaraisg, dar an leabhar der' ə L'əuur ; = rh, e.g. tórann to:rhiN', buarach, bhéaradh ; = zero, e.g. ar, bhar, by haplology in ceathrar, ar bi(o)th.

Short Vowels before Vibrants

491. Since vibrants, unlike nasals or laterals (§§ 478-488), have undergone a reduction of the original pattern of lenited and unlenited consonants, traces of the resultant tendency to modify some of the sounds adjacent to such consonants have manifested themselves in this, as in the other Irish dialects. With regard to short stressed vowels (§§ 422-432) in position before rr (unless a vowel immediately follows), rd, and word-medial rl, rn, the position is as follows :—

a, ai, ea = a:, e.g. ard, barr, t(h)arla ha:rLi:, fearr, bearnaidh, tairnge, aird, ceardcha, gearr, ndearnaidh, bearrtha.

The word airde as a comparative adjective or abstract noun is ord'ə, otherwise it is a:rd'ə.

o, oi, u, ui, = o, e.g. ord, ordlach, ordóg ordo:g, ordughadh ordu:, bord, toirrneach, urnaighthe, mhuirnín, urlár orLa:r.

Intrusive Consonants

492. Like extra vowels (§§ 441-444 ; cf. §§ 314, 315), extra consonants may develop in a word and modify its syllabic structure. The chief instances are initial s, and f, which had begun to establish themselves in early modern Irish ; and the appearance of t in word-final position.

493. Prothetic consonants include :—

(i) f, e.g. (f)éidir, (f)uaighél, (f)athach, (f)uar, (f)uacht, (f)uinn- seóg, (f)osgailte foskiL't'i:; cf. oisgeólaidh = fosklo:j. The wor (f)uireasbhaidh has alternative forms f/er'esi:.

(ii) s, e.g. (s)pairt spart', (s)naidhm, (s)gréach s'k'r'e:x ;

(iii) t, e.g. (t)obann teb'eN ; Cf. the transference of n in (a iomarcaidh N'umurki:, a development like that in Englis (n)ewt, (n)ickname, etc.

494. In word-medial positions, the following appear :—

(i) r, after a plosive, e.g. tuisleadh tris'L'ə, beangán b'r'iŋla:n (ii) t, e.g. s(t)raoill, and utterance-medially in mar gheall mi:Lt er' ; (iii) an intrusive h occurs next to lenited nasal laterals, and vibrants, intervocalically in talamh, buarac tanaidhe, etc.

495. Finally, the following developments take place :—

(i) t appears after certain nouns and verbal nouns former ending in ch, n, ng, l, or r, e.g. ceannach k'aNuxt, fulan miorbhail m'i:ru:L't', canamhain kanu:N't', gabháil (' beating go:L't', tarraing tariN't', coimhling, bagar bagurt'; similarly pronominal elements e.g. chluinfeadh muid xlin'hux mid'/mis' The word éigin is variously ək'i:n', ək'i:N't', ək'i:n'u ək'i:n'uxt ; the t in arís ə'r'i:s't' is evidently influenced b earlier forms of the word, cf. Hermathena, No. XLIV, 1926, p. 18

(ii) h occurs after a short vowel, if stressed, e.g. te t'eh, s(e)

Chapter XIII

METATHESIS

496. In certain sequences—mostly perhaps, because they are felt to be unsystematic—, the order of phoneme articulation is changed, and gives place to a new and usually more regular order. Most of the instances of this change occur in word-medial position.[1] The principal types are as follows[1] :—

(i) VC > CV, and (ii) transposition of consonants in CVC and CC sequences.

497. By the process that Grammont calls Anticipation, a consonant is shifted from its original position after a vowel to a new position before the vowel. The consonants mainly affected are r and l.

V*r* > *rV, e.g. tarsna trasɴi:, tiormughadh t'r'umu:, iolar ulrə, galar galrə, purgadóir porgudo:r' (in its by-form prugudo:r'), eadarghabháil adruga:l', deirbh-shiúr, dearbh-bhráthair.

Epenthesis and metathesis combine in the following :—

Albanach alubnux, dorn dorɴə.

498. Interchange of consonants separated by a vowel occurs in the following instances :—

(i) plosives, e.g. easgob aspuk, caibidil kad'ib'il' ; (ii) n, l, r, e.g. muinéal min'a:l (which has a by-form mil'a:n), muinchille mil'hiɴ'ə, and (with a still wider span) searmóin s'anumo:r' ; (iii) maidir lé mad'ir' l'e:, has a by-form mar'iḍ l'e:.

499. (i) medial CC clusters, consisting of a plosive followed by a fricative, are inverted in the following cases :—

[1]Other dialects sometimes solve the problem by epenthesis, e.g. admháil (§499) ≡ S. Irish adə'va:l', bolgam (§497) ≡ boləgəm in N. Irish.

absolóid aspulo:d', tuigsin t'is'k'iɴ't', tairgsin tar'is'k'iɴ't', i bhfoigse(acht) ə ves'k'uxt, abstal(easbol) aspul, admháil avda:l'. The forms páitse p'a:ʦ'ə and pa:s't'ə (páiste) are distinguished also as regards meaning ;

(ii) th, followed in word-medial position by n/l/r > nh, lh, rh, e.g. aithne, bóithre, sithléigeach, athrughadh ;

(iii) -chn- > nh in the word deichneabhar ;

(iv) the word galar (§ 497) has a by-form garlə (a type of metathesis that goes back to early Irish, cf. bélre > bérle, later Béarla) [1];

(v) the cluster -rth- is broken by metathesis in carthannach kahorɴux, comhartha.

500. The operation of metathesis may extend beyond simple word-limits, e.g. ar siubhal ər s'u:l, also ə s'ru:l.

Numbers denote paragraphs, unless otherwise specified

73. This narrow diphthongization facilitates the alternation with long monophthongs instanced in 79, 84, 89.

176. The opposition unlenited v. lenited is operative for N(′) v. n(′), e.g. Na:r′ə náire v. mə na:r′ə mo náire; N′art neart v. mə n′art mo neart.

200. The opposition unlenited v. lenited is operative likewise for L(′) v. l(′), e.g. La: lá v. γa: la: dhá lá; L′abi: leabaidh v. də l′abi: do leabaidh.

252. The consonant γ occurs medially in compounds, e.g. drox'γin′ə droch-dhuine, d′a:γin′ə deagh-dhuine.

326. Similarly i > u before L < l′ in ə vuL tu: re: an bhfuil tú réidh?

359. Omission of the vocative and preverbal articles a, do is exemplified in 248; of the vowel of is on page 86.

381. In line 4 feasta occurs adjunctively with anoir, which bears the main stress.

403. Further texts have appeared in Éigse, vols. viii, ix, x, xi, xii.

420. Line 5: ia = əu in diabhal.

430. Line 9: exceptionally i: in croidhe, oidhche.

440. Compare 357.

444. In dearbhtha, deilbhthe d′el′əf′i:, meirbhthean m′er′əf′ən, seargfaidh s′arəki: bh, g have been devoiced subsequently by th, f.

461. Palatal gh = g′ in glé-gheal.

465, 466. Compare 328.

471. Line 5: th = x′ before iə in a Thighearna.

477. On the development of v in ní bhfuair, etc. see Irish Dialects, page 44.

488. The treatment of original short vowels before certain clusters containing sonants indicates a major isogloss separating this dialect from the Irish of South Connacht; compare Celtica, vol. VII, pp. 126, 131.

491. In garrdha rr is treated as an intervocalic C.

493. Add: (iv) v, which develops in uaim, uait, etc.
